Hi. I am named Mocha, probably because I am the color of a nice cold Mocha Latte! I have been living with Paws Place for 21 months and counting now... They tell me that out there is a family just for me. A loving, patient one who will love me and all of my quirks.

Let me tell you exactly what I am looking for. I am known to be a 'Free Spirit'. I am looking for a quiet, adult only home because I am not 5lbs, or a puppy, and I forget that sometimes. So I can be a bit too much for the younger crowd. I just get excited is all. This also brings me to my next request. I would love a fenced in yard to run, run, run and play! So if you have a fenced in yard, no little ones, and lots of love to spare, I am your girl!

Anything Is Pawsible

When Boba Fett first arrived, his condition was critical. He was severely anemic & needed an emergency blood transfusion to survive. He hadn't had food in a long time, so he was fed slowly & supported with IV fluids. He was also battling a serious infection in his mandible & hip. He held one of his back legs up constantly, unable to use it due to pain. We started him on strong antibiotics, hoping to avoid surgery. After six weeks of intensive treatment, we made the decision to operate on his hip. The surgery was a success. Today, Boba Fett is healthy, strong, & using his leg normally—and we're overjoyed to share that he has multiple applications in the works. His journey is a testament to resilience, compassion, & the healing power of care.
